People often confuse words for hot and cold in Korean. 덥다 and 춥다 only refer to hot and cold when in relation to the temperature of the weather/air.

Other words for hot (뜨겁다) and cold (차갑다) are used in relation to something physical you can touch that is hot or cold (hot coffee, cold water, etc.)

The weather in Korea changes according to the seasons like most places. All 4 seasons are experienced however due to climate change, lately the time between Spring and Summer as well as the time between fall and winter has been getting shorter and shorter.

Summer brings very high humidity from June to late September as well as a brief rainy season that usually starts around late June and lasts until late July.

Also, pollution and yellow dust from China and within the country increases during the winter season. If you plan on visiting, I would recommend April/May as well as October as these times usually bring clear air and pleasant temperatures.
